ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The multidimensional database system automatically adds a new group in the existing layer information. Although the existing layer information does not have the 5   corresponding layer structure information for the newly added group or members, the multidimensional database system has a flexible feature to generate the layer information for the newly added group to accommodate the addition in a logical manner.